FOREWORD

Just as our high school days are filled with happy thoughts of the future, so shall our future days be filled with pleasant memories of the past. In order that these memories may live until the flowering buds of our youth have matured, and the flourishing petals of the future have withered, we, the Senior Class, have edited this, the Third Volume of

DEDICATION

TO

Mr. John D. Riddick

To one who has devoted his entire time during the past two years to the development and advancement of our high school, to the achievement of higher standards of sportsmanship, to the encouragement of students in their daily tasks, and to one who, as principal of George Washington High School, has exerted the greatest effort toward making it a stronger institution for student education, we, the Senior Class, dedicate this, the THIRD VOLUME of THE CAVALIER to J. D. RIDDICK, as an expression of our love and esteem for him.

In Appreciation

It would not be fitting for us to leave George Washington High School without showing our appreciation of Mr. Johnson, our Superintendent, and Miss Davis, our Sponsor. Never has Mr. Johnson been too busy to help us farther along toward our goal and to point out the obstacles. Miss Davis, our never-failing-help-in-time-of-trouble, always lends a sympathetic ear to all our tales of woe. We can never be grateful enough for their willing service.

Class Chronicles

NOW the history of the Class of Nine-and-Twenty of the George Washington High School of the City of Danville, County of Pittsylvania, State of Virginia, is in this wise:

In the beginning, in the twenty-fifth and nineteenth hundred year of our Lord, in the ninth month, and on the tenth day of that month, there invaded the sacred Halls of Learning a band of green and timid seekers after knowledge. No greener were to be found throughout the land.

Now a certain group, designated Sophomores, didst resolve to undertake the partial education of the inferior newcomers. This they did with blood-thirsty righteousness and did cause much suffering to mourning Freshmen.

But they that mourn shall be comforted: and lo, it came to pass that in the next year of our Lord the meek and lowly Freshmen inherited the sacred right to hold up their heads and avenge their wrongs upon a new band of seekers even as had been avenged upon them. This they did and right heartily.

Now it happened that the leader of their tribe, Mr. K. J. Clark, had taken himself to distant places and much grief pervaded the land. But there came to them another, namely, Mr. John D. Riddick, who took his place in their hearts and came to be beloved by all.

But lo, what wonderous thing came to pass in their third year? That which had long been sought for did come about, for they took up their abode in a new and splendid dwelling, even as had been prophesied. Great was the wonder and admiration throughout the land.

Now it came to pass that this year was one of much prosperity and the Juniors (for such they were) did open their lips and yell right lustily for their Championship Baseball Team even as they had done for the Champions of their Freshman year. Nor did they gloat and exult less over the fame and honor of their own Chatterbox.

Now it had been the custom in years gone by, that the Juniors should feast the departing Seniors. The Juniors did, therefore, gather together and spread the boards with bountiful supply, the like of which had never been equaled. And the walls did resound with their merriment. The guests did partake right generously of this repast. Then, behold, the doctors of the town profited and grew exceedingly rich.

Likewise it came to pass that the class bethought itself of pins and did straightway summon the jewelers from their own and neighboring cities. Dissensions did arise in the land over petty money matters and discussions did wax hot and furious.

And betide there came a time when the young warriors advanced to their fourth year. And truly there was no one in all the land of a more lordly or superior bearing. Now these great people did conceive an idea out of which arose the noble periodical known as THE CAVALIER. Then the Seniors were overly proud of their deed and their heads did swell to a goodly degree.

From distant pastures came a young prince with dreams in his brain and songs on his lips, and he chanted for them a great poem which they took as their own with great hue and shout. And likewise, as in the year before a longing for ornaments o'erwhelmed the Class of Nine-and-Twenty and again there ensued great warfare. Nor was this the least of such things. For the wise class had bethought itself of cards, invitations, caps, gowns, and other sundry matter.

And it did come to pass that of a sudden there was prodigious interest in solemn matters of learning. Many were the books perused and great was the burning of the mid-night oil thereof. For a great curse had descended over the school—the last time for the dear Seniors. At last the dread ordeal was over and the learned matter gotten rid of. Great was the gnashing of teeth and weeping and wailing of some as they received the little white cards. Others did rejoice and precipitate themselves into the air with huge glee.

And now the great moment of sheepskin arrived and departed and with it the Seniors who were sick and sore at heart at quitting their highly beloved and esteemed school. And it was history.

So may the blessings of their schoolmates follow each and every member of the class of Nine-and-Twenty through the long road of life forever and ever. AMEN.

Class Prophecy

Dear Miss Davis,

I am so very, very sorry that you could not be with us at our class reunion. Everyone seemed to have a grand time, but ten years makes quite a difference, doesn't it?

As Azile Schwarz, the class secretary, left for Europe immediately all the "whoopee" was over, she asked me to write and tell you of the good times that we had and how we missed you, our dearest adviser.

Perhaps I should tell you, first of all, what each one is doing—but before that, let me tell you of the program that we had. On Friday night, we had a regular get-together banquet, with a dance afterwards. This was held in the old gym. On Saturday morning, we went all over Danville, North Danville, and Schoolfield. Saturday afternoon, we all went to the movies like a flock of kids. We giggled and laughed, until everyone wondered what insane asylum had brought its inmates out for an airing. Saturday night, we had a dinner at Hotel Danville and a dance afterwards. Sunday, we went to the Episcopal Church and pretended we were listening to our Baccalaureate Sermon again. On Sunday afternoon and night, we almost lived in the station seeing off those who had to leave. I left on the 11:45 train for Washington where I now live. There was a farewell meeting after church. Believe me, we surely did have a marvelous time in those few short hours!

It will be better if I tell you about each one in the order that they came to the banquet on Friday night. Hazel Adams and Anne Anderson were first. Hazel is private secretary and Anne stenographer for the Superintendent of Public Utilities for the city. George Westbrooke, editor of the Bee, and Carrington Harrison, head doctor of the medical corps at the Memorial Hospital came in next. They were followed by Henrietta Ramos and Ruth Owens, who came straight from Paris. Henrietta is studying architecture and Ruth the art of marcelling.

James Bagby, the head of the Ford Manufacturing Corporation and Woodrow Bousman, district manager for Kresge's, came in with Stone Carter, who is a contractor and Hubert Coke, staff cartoonist on the Baltimore Sun.

Remember way back in '29 when Page Johnson and Wayte Fulton went to a convention at Columbia? Well, I don't know if that had any bearing on it or not, but Wayte is now chief man in tying knots at the "Little Church Around the Corner" and Page is head of the journalism department at Columbia. This letter is getting rather long, isn't it? I'll just tell you a little more about each one.

Berkley Adkins and Howard Holland are stock brokers, while Richard Critz is manager of the Giants. Raleigh Douglas and Howard Foster are touring the South in a minstrel show. It was only luck that they happened to be playing at Dundee and could run over to the grand "jamboree." Albert Ferguson said just to send his love and tell you that he would see you in Paris (that's in the general direction of Europe, isn't it?). Elizabeth Winn is about the only one that is living up to her ambition as printed in the dear old Cavalier—that of "making for her hero a home"! But Martha Harris (Harris still, notice) is in competition along the home making line also! Marguerite Motley is a music teacher and Reba Hayes is teaching at R.-M. I.

Susie Bass is head buyer for L. Herman's. (Remember her Shop Says Susie column in the Chatterbox?) Lucille Walker is bookkeeper for some tobacco firm in Winston-Salem, North Carolina. Evelyn Blair is teaching chemistry in the high school. She's not the only one that has returned to her Alma Mater, though, for Christine Bobbitt is teaching English; Lora Leftwich, Math; Louise McLaughlin, Social Problems, and Nellie Louhoff is gym instructor in the good old school. By the way, have you heard about the new science building and gym that has just been finished? The gym is the best equipped in the South and was endowed by Mr. Wilson. The building is called the Lefty Wilson Endowment Building.

Joe Friedman, as you must have heard, is taking Col. Lindbergh's place as Secretary of the Air Department in the President's cabinet. He has just resigned as editor-in-chief of the New York Times.

By the way, Stuart Scarboro designed their new building and the Harris Construction Company built it. Carroll Harris is president of the company. Lewis Motley and Reed Fuller have just returned from South Carolina, where they have been in the tobacco market. Everett Fowlkes, Herbert Gammon, and Carroll Gravely are members of the Chamber of Commerce. Everett is superintendent of schools. Herbert is manager of the cotton mills, and Carroll is clerk of court. Ellis Halperin is head jailer at the new Jailhouse. His avocation is kindergarten work in Schoolfield. Julian Hagood is coach of the boys' teams and assistant principal of the high school. Carter Heitzler is headline writer for the Register and Ray Hudgins is staff typist.

'Member the Dorsey Gang and all that bunch? Dorsey Jones is running a night club in New York and Landon Scott is city manager at Charlottesville. Cedric Taylor is humor editor of the American Magazine, while Paul Wall is teaching at William and Mary. Arthur Louhoff and James McGuire could not come but they sent telegrams. Earl Mitchell, the president, read them at the banquet. James is a futuristic artist in Harlem, and Arthur holds the Southern Golf Championship.

Gladys Cook, Martha Ferguson, Alma Doss and Edna Cooper are holding positions with the city, while Lona Dodd is head of the Math Department at Woodrow Wilson Junior High School. Josephine Bradner, Blondell Broome and Virginia Bryant are also keeping house for their heroes, while Mae Campbell is writing poetry and book reviews for Harper's Magazine. Vernell Brooks, as you know, has become a famous opera singer and Virginia Cobb accompanies her. Vivian Conway is teaching expression at Averett and Gladys Davis is sewing instructress at R.-M. I.

Mary Edmunds won't tell what she is buying all her new frocks for but we strongly suspicion that (buzz——buzz—zz.!!). Now aren't you surprised? Don't tell a soul.

Mary Evans is swimming instructor at Hylton Hall and Mary Frances Ferrell is Dramatic Editor for the Washington Herald. Marion Fitzgerald is married and living in Richmond. As head of the Cosmetics Department for the F. W. Woolworth Five and Ten Stores, Hazel Frix is simply great and Mr. Kalk's Orchestra couldn't do without Evelyn Gourley as violinist, Sidney Newman playing the clarinet and Daniel Klaff's drum.

Danville is receiving very efficient and satisfactory telephone service now that William Young, Jr., is manager of the Chesapeake and Potomac lines. Gordon Lea is wire chief in the same company. Did you know that the Yankees have just signed up Frank Lewis as fielder, Odell Pattisall as catcher, Herbert Ramsey as pitcher and Billy Powell as third baseman? We never thought that our team could put out such professionals, did we? Speaking of athletics, Earl Mitchell is coach at Washington and Lee this year. Taylor Motley is city editor of the Richmond Times-Dispatch and Anne Trundle (Cutie) is Dramatic Critic on the same paper.

Mable Waddell, Jewel Starr, Frances Osborne, Ruby Haar, and Viola Baines all came to the banquet bringing their husbands (this was permitted, if you had one!). Mary Haga is coach of athletics at Harrisonburg, Janet Harris is Latin instructor at R.-M. W. C. and Josie Lewis is doing social service work in the slums of New York. Faye Kympton is secretary to the principal of the high school, Harvey Yates.

Frances Land is head of the Home Economics Department at Harrisonburg and Josephine Reynolds is physical educational director for the Danville Public Schools. Ida Roach said tell you that she was living up to her ambition, but you'll have to ask her what it is!

As for me, well as you can tell from this letter, I am still just

RUBY TRAVIS.

P. S.—We will look for you in 1949! Yes, we are going to hold another reunion then. Please try to get there.

Class of '29.

The Last Will and Testament of the Senior Class

LET it be known that we, the SENIORS of GEORGE WASHINGTON HIGH SCHOOL, of the City of Danville, of the county of Pittsylvania, of the State of Virginia, realizing we will soon be of an unsound mind due to the horrors of examinations and at the same time being cognizant of the fact that we are now as sober as we were and ever will be, do hereby declare and affirm this to be OUR LAST WILL AND TESTAMENT, thereby, revoking all other such documents previously drawn up by us.

ITEM 1.—To Mr. Riddick, Mr. Johnson and all other such dignitaries, we humbly leave our lasting love (if they will have it) and our deepest sympathy (if their next class is anything like us).

ITEM 2.—To Mrs. Hill's future classes, we bequeath the useful and never failing topic of The Chatterbox and "Russell."

ITEM 3.— To the next Vergil class, that of '29 leaves the threadbare question of whether Dido or Aeneas was to blame for her tragedy.

ITEM 4.—To the Chemistry class, we bequeath a bottle of perfume to offset the strange and strong odors they originate.

ITEM 5.—To THE CAVALIER staff, we will a million dollars—worth of wishes for a million dollars.

ITEM 6.—To the cafeteria, we leave an order for chicken pie at least once a week.

ITEM 7.—To the young ladies aspiring to flowing golden locks, we leave a bottle of peroxide and the hairpins we have shed about the school. May their search be rewarded.

ITEM 8.—To the incoming cheer leader, we will the lungs of Azile Schwarz.

ITEM 9.—To Miss Orchard and Mrs. Hill, we bequeath our Senior themes on the condition that they will not fight over the extra one.

ITEM 10.—To Jake, we leave that other famous Virginia "Henry."

ITEM 11.—To Mr. Dunford, we bequeath a new camera to take the place of the overworked one which he used this year.

ITEM 12.—To Douglas Perkinson, since he has been looking pale and wan of late, we leave the extra avoirdupois of Martha Harris.

ITEM 13.—To the school in general, we leave the superstition that thirteen is an unlucky number and they will surely perish if they accept the bequest.

Signed and sealed by the class of 1929, this the eleventh day of June.

Witnesses:

JOHN D. RIDDICK, JR.
RUSSELL HILL, JR.

Codicile—

ITEM 1.—To the Advertising Managers of the school publications, we bequeath our charming and magnetic personalities to enable them to obtain numerous ads.

ITEM 2.—To the Rats, we leave our beloved chewing gum which is to be found under any desk. This should make their progress through High School swifter, and their minds clearer.

ITEM 3.—To our friends, the School Board, we leave a gilt-edge insurance policy which will protect them against burglars, fires, storms, and influenza.

FRESHMAN CLASS

Literary

Let's Prophesy

IN presenting this, the last issue of the triology of 1929, The Cavalier staff has attempted to do two things; first, to preserve the past for the future, and second, to predict, to a minor extent, the future by the past. Thus the present interprets the past in terms of the future.

But The Cavalier is no prophet. He, the prophet, is one who understands the present so that he can predict the future. This understanding requires, of course, a thorough knowledge of human nature, and wisdom enough to apply that knowledge. Another factor is a knowledge of the civilization surrounding the prophet, its achievements and its goals. In this, as in any other project of life, one must plan and reason rationally.

Perhaps the reader, and especially the graduate, can find an interesting thought there. If the past is understood and the problems of the present realized, then anyone with even just a fair degree of intelligence may plan and, to a major extent, "see" the future. The only requirement for such foresight is that he be clear and consistent in his reasoning. Herein lies wisdom—that a man be a prophet in his generation.

An Intercepted Message

Ottawa, Canada, U. S. A.
March 12, 2029.

My Dear Son,

My research work, into the customs and habits of the people that lived in the twentieth century, has revealed many interesting facts. The book will be off the press by July 1, but in the meantime, I am going to tell you a few of my findings.

In the "spring" of 1929, (in those days there were seasons over which people had no control) a certain daring young fellow drove one of those vehicles that was propelled by huge internal combustion motors and a liquid fuel called gasoline, at the rate of two hundred and thirty-one miles an hour. Many editorials were written about the feat, the writers saying that such dangerous speed could never be used. To us, those statements are ridiculous. Little could those writers have dreamed that we, in luxurious cars that travelled in vacuum tunnels, could cross an ocean or a continent in from three to ten minutes!

The streets of those times must have been even more hideous-looking than they were just a few years ago when vehicles were still propelled by radio transmitted power. Now, of course, the atom is doing all of the work. In 1929, however, cars with iron wheels that fitted on iron rails, actually had to get their power from lines suspended overhead. The din of this metal on metal must have been terrific. What a relief to have everything silent!

In those days, an occasional war was an economic necessity. Today it is an economic impossibility. Imagine a war to-day! Twenty-four hours after war was declared, there wouldn't be a living thing on this earth. One death beam, operated by one robot, could cover the entire earth in a day. And since we have never communicated with anything off of this planet, the world, so far as we know, would be no more.

You know, of course, that in the early part of the 20th century Canada belonged to England, and Mexico was an independent nation. In those days, Canada's secession was never even thought of. When, however, the United States and England opposed each other in that last of all conflicts, the War of 1960, and Canada, not in sympathy with Great Britain, sided with the United States, Mexico sided with England, and the result, as you know, is that the eastern North American Continent now composes the United States of America.

I have merely scratched the surface of my findings in this note to you. Don't laugh when you read about their methods of teaching school. From five or six days out of every seven, about six hours were consumed in attending school. Today, electro-communication impulses enter the brain while we sleep. I imagine a man would have been called crazy in those days had he predicted anything like that.

I won't tell you any more. Read my book.

Yours,

Dad.

Beyond the Veil

Virginia Bryant, '29

I sat on a hillside,
A soft grassy hillside,
Watching the clouds go by,
When out of the golden twilight
A bird, so snowy white,
Sailed out of the misty sky
And circled slowly by.

He lit on a fig tree,
A sweet blooming fig tree,
And lifted his snowy white head.
"Come hither, fair Maiden,
With new dreams heavy laden
If the Future you'd see," he plead,
"Come follow the Angel Bird ahead."

"Pin on these wings of Hope,
These lovely white wings of Hope,
Put on this cloak of Happiness gay,
And these shoes of Good Fortune
And with caps in tune
We'll speed on our way
To eternal sunshine and day."

We sailed like butterflies
Two light dancing butterflies,
Playing the Angel Bird's game,
Down the Valley of Destruction
Across rocks of Desperation,
Until at last we came
To a golden Ladder of Fame.

We ascended that ladder,
That high, reaching ladder,
To the Hall of Recognition,
We were allowed to ponder,
To gaze at the splendor
Of the wonderful realization
That would be our Salvation.

The edge of a veil,
A gray, misty veil,
Hung fluttering so hard.
"Beyond that veil," said he,
"Lies a deep blue sea
Of courage and Faith in God,
And an island of Holy sod."

He lifted that veil,
That gray, misty veil,
And had me gaze out—oh! so far.
There on an island,
Spread out on the sand
That stretched from us afar.
Was a perfect Utopia.

I sat on the hillside,
That soft, grassy hillside,
Thinking of what he bears.
"Remember with glee
All you did see,
As you journeyed across the years,
And you'll never have cause for tears."

Looking Into the Future

Is historical research prophetic? The answer comes down through the ages:

"History is the depository of great actions, the witness of what is past, the example and instructor of the present, and the monitor of the future."—Cervantes.
"He who knows the whence will also know the whether."—Van Sybel.
"History is but the unrolled source of prophecy."—James A. Garfield.

Yet research shows that man through the ages has sought to read the future, not in the light of the past, and the understanding of the present, but in the wonders of nature, the mysticism of cults, and the superstition of his own mind.

THE ASTROLOGER

Christine Bobbitt, '29

A night on the banks of the Nile, under the shadows of the Sphinx. Here we had come to gaze at the ruins of the civilization of the Egyptians. Under the Pyramids with their magic spell, we lingered. They almost seemed to breathe the spirit of ancient lore. A man robed in rich purple, resplendent with golden hieroglyphics emerged from the shadows of Menes' pyramid. In his hand he held a scroll, which he opened and consulted and then turned his eyes toward the heavenly bodies. What was he doing? Nay more, was he not an Egyptian! Ah, we have it! He was consulting the stars to find in what house a new born child's lot was cast.

Our guide explained to us that the circles of heaven were divided into twelve equal parts: six above and six below the horizon and each space between the circles was called a "House of Heaven" and symbolized different advantages and disadvantages. These houses are: House of Life, House of Riches, House of Brethren, House of Parents, House of Marriage, House of Droth, House of Health, House of Religion, House of Dignities, House of Friends, House of Enemies, and House of Children.

To the priest the stars in each house tell a tale of destiny—The new born infant's life lies spread before him. Thus the Egyptian seems, through his astrology, to have found an open sesame to the future.[1]

The Romany

Ruby Travis, '29

"Man was born from the kiss of the eagle and the snake; the gypsy being nearer the eagle"—thus reasons the son of Romany. "We move, we travel and we, in that final tomorrow that comes to every man, will be the first to fly."

Satisfied with general outlines, these happy, carefree rovers never look at a thing closely, yet their eyes have acquired a technique of seeing more at a glance than most men do.

The gypsy takes the confidence that the white man puts in his prophetic powers as a joke. To tell fortunes is easy, yes, as easy as telling fairy tales to willing, eager kindergarten children; for this is told to the nervous, overwrought woman and "the-young-man-in-love." The gypsy is able to read the face like a book—to tell by the expression in the eager eyes when she "hits the spot" in her prophecies. If the eyes brighten, the lips curve in a smile, she keeps on telling the blond young lady of the dark, handsome, brown-eyed young man who loves her, but is too bashful to tell her about it.

Perhaps the laughing, carefree gypsy seems romantic; perhaps the mystery or the fact that her life is so different appeals to the "Jajo," or white man, but the call of the open road means adventure to most all the American public. The gypsy fortune teller, in spite of all the spells she works on her consultants, does not believe in super-natural powers, but believes that happiness is health and that laughter is the gold of the voice.

Spiritualism

Louise McLaughlin, '29

Man is, by nature, inquisitive. Ignorant of the purpose of his existence, he seeks to fathom the mysteries of Life and Death. Spiritualism is the outgrowth of his scientific curiosity and his desire for assurance of eternal life.

Spiritualim is the belief that mortals, through the help of mediums, can communicate with dead spirits. The medium goes, more or less, into a trance, in which state he gets closer to the spiritual world. He then transfers through automatic writing or trance-speaking, messages from persons deceased to living persons.

The doctrine of Spiritualism is especially prevalent after a war. At such a time people begin to wonder if their slain loved ones still exist in some other world; if they are happy; if they are separated from the living by an inseparable gulf. Their motive now is affection augmented by curiosity. They seek methods of intercommunion.

The majority of people, at the present time, are inclined to be skeptical of the so-called Spiritualists. Their unbelief is based on the fact that the majority of mediums have been proven deceptive. It is not that modern man is indifferent to his future life. He merely seeks a more definite proof of after life that Spiritualism gives him.

Louise McLaughlin

The night was warm and clear. Gentle breezes fanned him as he approached the Earth. He flapped his wings with a new determination. Nothing should stay him now. He dropped wearily upon a passing cloud and lay, resting a moment. A journey a-wing from Mars to mother Earth—where she had been nourished, bless her!—was exhausting, to say the least. But he must be up! The night was already begun, and he had work to do before dawn. He swung himself off the cloud and again sought the Earth.

As he flew, he made plans. She would be dew-bathing at the popular resort. It would not be hard to snatch her away without being immediately discovered; but what of her wings? Her father, he knew, had them securely locked in his private hangar. Clever man! There was probably not another pair in the country which she could safely wear, yet he could not possibly carry her away without them. She would need them before their journey was completed. He sighed. There was no sense in appealing to her father again. He would never consent to his daughter's marrying a native of Mars. He had said as much, in plain language, the last time he had been approached. The Marsian in question sighed again. Only his pride kept him from wishing that he had been born on the Earth.

Still meditating, he dropped down beside the hangar and looked around. No one in sight. He tried the lock. It was a good one. What could he do? He pondered. Then he had an idea. He circled up and around the hangar and approached the pretentious elevated dwelling of its owner. He dropped on the roof and listened. He heard a sawing noise. The old man was evidently asleep. If so, all was well. The Marsian flew lightly to the porch. He smiled as he noticed the position of the sleeper, (The noise which he had heard was the snoring of his antagonist) who was obviously waiting up for his wife. There was a fierce expression on his face, and one hand grasped a rolling-pin. The Marsian wasted another smile for the scene of the wife's return, slipped an unobtrusive hand into the old man's apron pocket, extracted the keys to the hangar, and was gone. Soon he was making his way toward the dew-bathing resort, her wings under his arm, and the keys safely back in the pockets of the sleeper on the porch.

As he thought, it was but a matter of minutes before he had the girl deposited on a swift-moving cloud. She resisted but little, and no one noticed him as he swooped down and snatched her up. Those who saw him supposed him to be only another bather. There was nothing strange in his darting up into the sky with one of the girls, to dive back again. What they didn't know was that he didn't come back.

When they were well on their way, she broke the silence by laughing. He had always liked that laugh of hers—so different from the harsh laughter of the women of his native planet. He felt strangely exalted and happy.

"But where," she asked, breaking the silence again, "are we going on our honeymoon?"

"Where?" he echoed. "Where do you suppose?"

"To the Moon," she answered, dreamily, watching that silver disc hide behind a cloud.

"Good guess. That's where we are going."

She was frightened. She hadn't expected him to take her seriously. She was more frightened than ever, a moment later, when she saw an army of strangely familiar yet unusual flying animals overhead. In reply to her query as to what they were, he replied,

"Oh, that's just a flock of flying heifers. Quite common in this part of the universe." His voice was so matter-of-fact, and, withal, so indifferent, that she was reassured. She watched the moon as it emerged from the cloud. The night wind whispered. It was her wedding night. She smiled.

Shattering the Atom

Carroll Harris, '29

In this fast age of science and invention, man is trying continuously to discover new formulas and advance new theories. Ever since the birth of science man has tried to extract energy from matter. Now science is experimenting with the atom.

Attention is now being turned to a new source of energy derived from atomic disintegration or the breaking up of the atom. It is possible to break up a few of the common atoms and get altogether different forms of matter. If science can devise means of breaking up the atoms into all the common elements it will have solved for the world the problem of future power. This power could be harnessed, and made to run our machines, and to cook our food.

The process now under way at Carnegie Institute is to use high voltage electricity as projectors, and to fire these projectors into the central massive structure of the nucleus of the atom. These high speed electrical projectors hit the nucleus of the atom with such force as to disrupt the nucleus and to blow away some of its electrons. This would cause the atom to change its state of matter since every atom of matter has a definite number of electrons, and the blowing away of any number would cause the atom to change into an atom of different matter. Thus it only remains for man to tap this unlimited power.

The best scientific opinion as quoted from the Earl of Birkenhead in the Cosmopolitan magazine—believes that before 2029 physicists will have solved the problem of supplying the world with limitless amounts of cheap power. At present one pound of coal yields one horse power for one hour. Stored up in the atoms which constitute a pound of water, there is an amount of energy equivalent to ten million horse power hours of work. There is no question that this colossal source of energy exists, but as yet, physicists do not know how to release it, or having done so, how to make it perform useful work. By tapping this stupendous source of power, man will have enough cheap energy to enable him to alter the geography or the climate of the earth. From fifty thousand tons of water, man could get enough energy to remove Ireland to the deeper portion of the Atlantic Ocean or enough heat to keep the polar region at the temperature of the Sahara for one thousand years. Engines weighing one ounce for one horse power they develop will be practicable; and power plants of six hundred horse power will carry fuel for one thousand hours, in a tank no larger than a fountain pen. Thus, you see, if man can but get within the atom, his problem of cheap power will be solved forever.

Organizations

Foreword

What does the Future hold for the Organizations of George Washington High School, which to us have meant joy and pleasure throughout our high school days? Surely, the spirit of the school will continue to express itself in such worthwhile activities, as it has done in the past.

The Organizations of G. W. H. S. bring about co-operation between the faculty and the student body; they encourage clean athletics and bring us into closer contact with our friends. They work together toward a larger and better George Washington High School.

STUDENT COUNCIL

The Student Council

The Student Council of the George Washington High School is an organization composed of students representing every home room in school. The Junior and the Senior home rooms have two representatives each; the others, one.

The council endeavors to express the spirit of the student body at large and through it, the desires of the students are expressed to the faculty. It tries to raise the standards of scholarship, to create school spirit, and to encourage participation in all school activities.

ATHLETIC COUNCIL

The Athletic Council

Besides managing the sale of tickets to see athletic events, the Athletic Council has uplifted the attitude and spirit of the school to a great extent. A group of hustlers and business people, such as the Athletic Council has shown itself to be is a credit to any high school. The Council's aim is to have everyone present at all the affairs presented by the school. It is indeed a worthy one, and under the guidance of Mr. L. G. Wilson more has been accomplished towards this set goal this year than ever before.

THE PRESS CLUB

The Press Club

The Press Club, an organization of students and advisers associated with The Chatterbox and THE CAVALIER, has gradually grown in importance since its inception in 1926. It has been an active sponsor of all publication work attempted in the school, and this year has laid a definite foundation for a school morgue.

To instill in students the ideal of scholarship; to advance the standards of the profession of journalism by developing better journalists and by inculcating a higher code of ethics; to promote exact and dispassionate thinking, clear and forceful writing, is the purpose of the Quill and Scroll.

The Quill and Scroll, founded at the University of Iowa, is a National Honorary Society for high school journalists. G. W. H. S. was the first school in Virginia to be granted a chapter of Quill and Scroll.

The requirements for active membership are: the aspirants must be of Junior or Senior classification; they must be in the upper third of their class in general scholastic standing; they must have done outstanding work in writing, editing, or in business management; they must be recommended by the supervisor or by the committee governing publications, and they must be approved by the national secretary of the society.

GIRLS' LITERARY SOCIETY

Girls' Literary Society

The aim of the Girls' Literary Society is to cultivate the ability to express ideas in clear and forceful English; to create an interest in the problems of our nation and of the world and in their solution.

The Hi-Y Club is an organization of boys in the high school who strive "to create and maintain throughout the school and community high standards of Christian character." The club is one of the many Hi-Y Clubs scattered throughout the country.

At their meetings there is real fellowship and enjoyment. The faculty sponsors are: Mr. Riddick, Mr. Christopher, Mr. Wilson, and Mr. Simpkins. Their interest and help have been of great value to the boys. Mr. Hyler, of the Y. M. C. A. staff is the supervisor.

The student body seeing the need of more school spirit, with the aid of Mrs. Marvin Siddle, organized the Boosters' Club in October, 1928. The club has succeeded in carrying out its purpose to such an extent that the school spirit has been raised to win State-wide recognition.

AIM—To awaken, promote and develop the latent minds of the youth of our High School in regard to natural phenomena; which tends to form the habit of orderly arrangement of data, removal of superstition, sound judgment and partial realization of a greater tomorrow of natural science.

The Orchestra

Although it has had a limited time in which to practice, the George Washington High School Orchestra has accomplished more this year than at any time in the past. It has appeared before the student body on several occasions and has always striven to stimulate the interest of outsiders in the school. The students themselves have been brought to view music from a much broader angle, due to the tireless efforts of Mr. Kalk, the director.

THE CAVALIER STAFF

The Cavalier

This term, '29, the George Washington High School made another step toward progress by beginning the publication of a magazine, The Cavalier. Heretofore, The Cavalier, has published only one issue a term, the annual, or Senior issue. This term it has published three issues, two literary, and the Senior issue. The new magazine was begun as a trial. Through the aid of Miss Crawley, Miss Smith, Miss Orchard, and Mr. Simpkins it has proved a great success, taking third prize in its class, at the Columbia Scholastic Press Association, sponsored by Columbia University.

The George Washington High School should be proud of her newspaper publication, The Chatterbox. It has made marvelous strides during the course of the last three or four years. The publication has been exceedingly fortunate in having Mrs. W. R. Hill as an adviser, who has given her time unselfishly and devotedly to promote higher achievements for The Chatterbox. The staff has always been composed largely of faithful, tireless workers whose energetic zeal has greatly contributed to the success The Chatterbox has already attained. Rising from mere oblivion, The Chatterbox has now carried off State and National honors. For two successive years it has been given first place in its class by the C. S. P. A. at Columbia University, Lexington, Virginia, and has received All-American rating by the N. S. P. A. (formerly C. I. P. A.) at the University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Minnesota.

Athletics and Miscellaneous

G. W. H. S. LETTER MEN

Football Team

JAMES WEDBEE (Red)

Line plunging fullback, played his first year in the back field, and proved himself to be one of the Cardinals' best ground gainers.

JAMES ANTHONY (Mark)

Star maroon and gray tackle held down his position like a veteran until he fractured his collar bone in practice. Anthony was also a great barrier to the opposing Cardinal team at guard, and the school expects an excellent showing from him next year.

JAMES ARNETT (Sam)

Showed the school that one does not need to be large to make a good guard. Besides being the smallest man on the team Sam was one of the best.

WILLARD ARNETT (Will)

Played his first game for the Cardinals after the season was half over. Willard was one of the fastest men on the team.

BURROUGHS DANIEL (Ace)

Stalwart halfback, did the kicking and passing for the team until he tore a ligament in his knee. The football fans were always pleased to see Ace in the back field. He also held the position as fullback and backed up the line like an All Star.

ALBERT FERGUSON (All But)

Captain, was the only letter man in the line. As a pivot for his team there was none better, and the team will feel the loss of Ferguson greatly in the line next year.

STERLING HOLCOMBE (Windy)

Star end and halfback was the best broken field runner on the team. Holcombe's experience as a letter man helped the '28 team immensely.

EDWIN HARRIS (Ed)

Cardinal field general, was one of the fastest "backs" on the team. Ed's ability at recovering punts was the marvel of many fans. He will probably make a triple threat man in college.

RANDOLPH BRADLEY (Goat)

Held down the right end of the Cardinal team and proved himself capable of stopping any gain around the right wing.

HUBERT CLARK (Red)

Red-headed left guard, showed the school a brand of football that any player would be proud of. Hubert is holding the football honors in the family by keeping up to the reputation of his older brothers "Monk" and Charlie.

CURTIS POWELL (Little Bill)

Was also an excellent field general at quarterback. Curtis helped in the punting and passing for the Cardinals.

ALFRED EDWARDS (Stonewall)

Lined up to his name as "Stonewall" in every game by proving himself able to stop all line plungers. "Stonewall" can also be classed as "one tough number." He played nearly a whole game with three broken ribs.

RICHARD CRITZ (Dick)

Halfback for the G. W. Team made himself famous by his long sweeping end runs and his aerial attacks upon the opposing teams.

JAMES FARLEY (Huey)

Did not have a special position on the team, for he was capable of filling any position in the line. He played center, guard and tackle and has an enviable record at all three.

HERBERT RAMSEY (Herb)

Right end terror, holds an enviable record at smashing long end runs and off tackle plays.

THURMAN SWARINGER (Curley)

Another staunch tackle, was one of the hardest tacklers on the team although light of weight. Not many gains were made over his position.

STONE CARTER (Stone Gap)

The most severe tackler on the Cardinal line played his first year and holds a fine record.

JOHN TYREE (Johnny)

Cardinal eleven manager did not get a chance to play with team because of being a post graduate. His experience, however, helped Coach Wilson in forming a team.

BOYS' BASKET-BALL

Boys' Basket-Ball

The Cardinal Cagers began their practice unusually early this year, and as a result were in excellent shape before the other quints had rounded into form.

The season opened auspiciously with a win over the Strong Schoolfield "Y" quint. The team then ran wild, defeating Reidsville, Martinsville, and Lynchburg in short order before they were halted by the strong aggregation at Hargrave Military Academy. In the remaining contest the Cardinals did a little better than break even, losing the championship of the western half of the State to Roanoke, whom they had twice defeated in prior games, in a heart-breaking struggle.

The showing made by the team was a decided improvement and the faculty and patrons of the school displayed their interest and appreciation of the team's efforts by giving them record-breaking crowds at all the home games.

Coach Wilson was well pleased with the showing made by his charges, and spoke highly of the spirit of co-operation and interest which was displayed by the boys.

By the cooperation of Miss Donaldson, the Girls' Basket-Ball coach, and by the outstanding sportsmanship the girls have displayed the 1929 Girls' Basket-Ball team has made a name for itself. The players have been eager to make their team prominent and this year their desire has been materialized because of the efforts of the entire team.

BASEBALL TEAM

The 1928 Baseball Team

The season of 1928 was very successful, as the team lost only one game out of the fourteen. It captured the State Championship, defeating Maury High School of Norfolk for class A, and in turn defeated Clifton Forge in class B.

It received a trophy which is to be awarded to the team that wins the state championship two successive years. If the State Championship is won again this year the trophy will remain as a permanent possession of the team.

If Carter Heitzler would ever stop eating?

WRITER'S APOLOGY

To the victims of this coarse so-called humor, I dedicate this little essay. By "the powers that be," it is necessary to put that (which makes the mouth broaden) in each issue of the Cavalier and the task has been thrust upon me. I repeat, dear reader, woe is me for after I concoct these terrible ditties, people only laugh at them! I further repeat, we know not why our fellow suffers, for the triangles will not become congruent; neither will the x and y combine as quoted by the "good book" (?)

It is necessary therefore in order to produce he-haws, snickers, chuckles, et cetera, to tickle the floating ribs and thusly will the above waste become beneficial.

"Ced."

THE IMPRINT OF PRIDE

PRINTING is the great constructive force of the modern civilized world. It plays the indispensable part in the dissemination of news, in the expression and progression of political ideals, in the records and exchange of commerce and industry. It democratizes education, science, art, music —and broadens the scope of everything it touches. ¶To appreciate its high place in the esteem of an enlightened world, PRINTING MUST BE WELL DONE. Our offering to the cause of BETTER PRINTING is REPRESENTED IN THIS ANNUAL
